The Regency Restaurant is the oldest seafood restaurant on Brighton seafront. The Restaurant is a Grade II listed building and was originally built as the palatial seaside home by Thomas Coutts the founder of Coutts Bank in the early part of the 18th century, so that his wife could eat her favourite dish of King Prawns looking out at the sea.

When Mr Coutts died, leaving his wife Harriet the richest woman in Europe, she remarried the Duke of St Albans and they lived at the house throwing lavish parties by the seaside. It was turned into a restaurant in 1930.

The building still maintains all its original features as chosen by Harriet Coutts.
